

REGULAR FEATURES

Comment	2
Bubbling up
Usage 1	6
Differing in agreement: a report on LANGSCAPE 3
Pam Peters
Crossworld	21
Frank Palmer
Feedback	28
Responses to Modiano
Lexicon	35
Wombatography
Lois Aleta Fundis
Usage 2
Another change in standard English pronunciation?	43
Paul Rastall
It isn't /hæt/, it's /hat/!	44
Michael Bulley
Style &amp; Rhetoric	49
Good grammar or good machines?
André Gabriel
Reviews &amp; Displays
Realistic aims, unrealistic price	57
Robert Allen
An expansive work	58
Roshan McArthur
Recent titles	59

Editor TOM McARTHUR

Editorial Board

FRANÇOIS CHEVILLET
Université Stendhal, Grenoble

DAVID CRYSTAL
University College of North Wales, Bangor

ALAN S. KAYE
California State University, Fullerton

LORETO TODD
School of English, University of Leeds

KATIE WALES
School of English, University of Leeds

Design/DTF Peter Ducker

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

English TODAY™

THE INTERNATIONAL REVIEW OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

ET 58 (Vol. 15 No.2)

April 1999

Langscape 6: Surveying contemporary English usage 3
Pam Peters concludes her worldwide Cambridge University Press project

The future of Englishes 10
David Crystal asks whether an increasing awareness of the sheer international variety in the English language necessitates a new pedagogy for a new century

International English in the global village 22
Marko Modiano presents a novel view of how English might or should be modelled at the turn of the millennium – followed by comments from Michael Toolan, Augustin Simo-Bobda, Loreto Todd, Alan S. Kaye, François Chevillet, and Prayag D. Tripathi

The Fat Owl of the Remove meets the Ness peril 39
Laurie Bauer reflects on some changes in what is taken to be worthwhile reading and how a trick of word-forming style once highlighted the 'brokenfulness' of broken English

English everywhere in China 46
Kang Jianxiu describes how English is on the move throughout the People's Republic

The galactic language 52
Tom McArthur comments on the power and prestige of Californian usage at the end of the twentieth century